LITERATURE AREAS

Comparative Literature majors are required to complete upper division coursework in two literature areas. Coursework in the Primary Literature Area must be taught in the original language. If students select English as their Primary Literature Area, then all coursework in the Secondary Literature Area must be taught in the original language. Students who choose a language other than English for their Primary Language Area are permitted to complete upper division literature in translation courses for their Secondary Literature Area requirements.

Students should consult with the Student Services Advisor and/or Director of Undergraduate Studies to select appropriate literature courses in their Primary and Secondary Literature Areas. A list of pre-approved courses can be found on the Department of Comparative Literature website (<https://complit.ucla.edu/>) under the Major and Minors section of the Undergraduate tab.

DEPARTMENTAL HONORS

Departmental Honors are awarded upon graduation to Comparative Literature majors who maintain at least a 3.5 departmental and a 3.25 overall GPA.

Departmental Honors candidates must complete a fourth course in the Primary Literature Area and an honors research paper (in addition to regular course requirements) in two of the four required upper division Comparative Literature courses, as well as satisfying all major requirements. Candidates must also complete Comparative Literature 198 with a core faculty member. Students enrolled in COM LIT 198 are expected to complete a senior honors paper of approximately 25 pages.
